

Summary of DOM additions:

Every template acquires an array of references to instances of the template.

Every instance acquires:

- ... a reference to the template it was created from.
- ... a reference to the model it was created from.
- ... an array of references to instances of its [immediate] sub-templates (named subinstances).

Parent elements of instances acquire a reference to the collection that was used to create all of the instances appended underneath it. All elements created as part of an instance acquire a reference to the instance they belong to.